Eight-thirty o'clock was the hour for the ceremony, read by Dr. William Martin. Mr. Turney gave his lovely daughter in marriage. She wore a white satin gown with a three yard train, and a silk tulle veil which fell in graceful folds from a cap of exquisite lace which had belonged to her great grandmother. Completing the costume of last night's bride was a shower bouquet of orchids, mystery gardenias and bouvardia.

MAKE THIS FROCK FOR EVERY DAY; YOU'LL LOVE ITS CHIC DETAILS

PATTERN 4052

By ANNE ADAMS

You'll find out—if you haven't already—that when Anne Adams designs a frock, it's certain to be the last word in smartness and ever so easy to make—and this holds true of this delightful afternoon style, Pattern 4052. There's a bit of the unusual about the cool sleeve, for you may omit the cute cut-effect and wear the sleeve a trifle shorter if you like. The yoke is clever, too, and most becoming cut on rounding lines, while the simple bodice provides shapely fit with generous gathers. How would you like it in dainty dotted Swiss, percale, pique, crepe or linen? Each one's ideal, especially if novel buttons are chosen in a contrasting color.

Pattern 4052 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 1/2 yards of 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

COME TO CHURCH

The Church is the meeting place for God and His People

What Think Ye Of Christ?

Text: Matthew 22:42. What think ye of the Christ? Whose son is He?

This is one of the most important questions ever asked, and yet after more than nineteen hundred years many have not yet answered it. Some have persistently refused to consider it, possibly for fear of what the correct answer would involve. Others have allowed other things to crowd the question out of the focus of attention.

Some have misinterpreted the question and have answered it as though it read: What think ye of the church, or the church members or the ministers? But the question is: "What think ye of the Christ?" Some will sidetrack the issue and answer as though the question were: What think ye of His historicity, or His moral life, or His teachings, etc. But these are only begging the question. Let us keep the question clearly before us: "What think ye of the Christ? Whose son is He?"

Some will agree that He was an historical character and yet fail to recognize in Him the Son of God, the Saviour of men. They put Him on the same plane as Moses and Joshua and Isaiah and St. Augustine and Luther and Wesley and Knox and other great religious leaders and reformers but miss the essential and unique thing about Him.

And some admire His sinless life and are willing to call Him "the crystal Christ." They will say that Pilate was right in saying: "I find no fault in Him." They will even admit that in this He was unique among all the people who have ever lived, and yet fail to see that that very fact implies something more, something infinitely deeper, something entirely unique in regard to His nature, His person and His relationship to God.

And some will read and admire His words and agree that nowhere else in all the world's literature do we find such heights of moral grandeur depicted as in the words of Jesus. Even many skeptics bow in humble admiration before the moral beauty of His words, but fail to see that since "never man so spake" that very fact singles him out as something different from other men.

A SERMONETTE "COME TO CHURCH CAMPAIGN"

By W. A. LOWE, Pastor, Costa Mesa Community Methodist Episcopal Church

COSTA MESA COMMUNITY METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH—NINETEENTH STREET AND NEWPORT HARBOR BLVD.

Hours of Service: Sunday School at 9:45 A.M. Public Worship at 11 A.M. Epworth League at 6:30 P.M. Evening Service at 7:30 o'clock. Mid-week Service, Wednesday, 7:30 P.M.

But those who are following Him have come to the same conclusion Peter came to when he said: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." True, He was an historical character, a perfect man morally, a man who spoke as no other man ever spoke, but He was more than that. He was and is "the Christ, the Son of the Living God." You can explain Him in no other way. Heredity, environment, education, which explain much in our lives, utterly fail to explain Him. He can be explained only on the basis of divinity. Leave that out and He is the great unexplainable.

Of course that implies that He has authority for us as well as a mission to us and to the world. He "came to seek and to save that which was lost." He came to save the individual who has missed the highest goal of life and is living a life of sin and shame, of course. But He also "came to seek and to save" men in their social and business and economic relationships as well. Salvation through Christ is more than an inner sense of spiritual exaltation, more than an inner emotional thrill which still allows the person to go on sinning against his fellowmen while he professes to love God with all his heart, mind, soul and strength. It certainly includes loving one's neighbor and treating him as we would want to be treated were our positions reversed.

No one but the Son of God could have such authority and such a mission. No one but He has the power to transform persons so they will fit into a transformed social order or the kingdom of God. He is the one who can meet the greatest need of the human race. He is "the Christ, the Son of the Living God." "Come, let us worship and bow down" before Him and arise and go forth in His strength to conquer the world and build the Kingdom of God among men.

THE TWYMITES

Story by MAI COCHRAN     Directed by GEORGE SCARDO

Ol' Tlinder to the moonbeams said, "Well, I have no doubt that you dread to have me hang around here. Just the same, I'm going to stay.

"I blotted out the bright old moon, but he'll be all right pretty soon. He'll have to wait, however, till no more I want to play.

"You see, with thunder I've had fun, and stop and think what I have done with lightning. Why, I've entertained the Tinymites real well.

"Right now, I'll bet they hope that I do something else out in the sky. Just give me time, I'll think of some new trick that will be swell."

right."

They reached the old moon very quickly and Scouty said, "Now, here's the trick. We'll jerk the cloth right off his head and once more he can shine."

"Perhaps, then, Thunder will go 'way."

"Ah, no more, Scouty, need you say," cried Coppy. Then they jerked the cloth. The moon cried out, "That's fine!"

And then to Cappy Scouty ran. "Come on with me. I have a plan," he whispered. And the two tots quickly scampered out of sight.

Said Scouty, "Let's go to the moon, and we'd best do it pretty soon. We'll fool ol' Thunder, if the plan I have in mind works."

ONE of the most active and progressive, political leaders in United States history was Theodore Roosevelt. Graduate of Harvard, lawyer, political reformer, soldier, historian, naval executive, naturalist, and big game hunter, "T. R.," as he was known, started the 20th century with a notable record for peace and progress.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

The choice of a party dress often depends on the party going along.

After winning fame as "Rough Rider" during the Spanish-American War, and following assassination of President McKinley, he became president of the United States. His efforts in bringing about peace between Russia and Japan, in 1905, brought him the Nobel Prize for peace.

His disappointment at the reactionary policy of his own party in 1912, caused him to organize the Progressive party and run again for the presidency. This split the Republican party and made possible the election of Woodrow Wilson. Still active at the beginning of the World War, he sought to lead an American regiment to France. In 1919, he died at the age of 61, sore and disgruntled.

New Fiction IN PUBLIC LIBRARY

BY VERA RAMSEY

"Beyond Sing the Wooka" by Trygve Gulbransen, is the family chronicle of a Norwegian family. These people of the North are strong, rugged personalities. Most of the predecessors of the present family came to tragic ends. The present chronicle tells a lyric love story of the son of the family and a beautiful girl.

The characters and setting of this novel are quietly set forth. There is none of the gigantic proportion of the epic such as is found in the great trilogies of Sigrid Undset. Readers who appreciate fine background and careful delineation of character will enjoy reading this book. There is a great amount of everyday understanding of the ordeal of strong natures who come up against the forces of existence. It is the careful portrayal of detail that gives authenticity to this.

The style of writing in the book lends poetry to the atmosphere described. The magical setting of the old hall and the singing woods is brought to us in a prose that has a music of its own.

"The Hill" by Eleanor Green is also built around a family. The members of a large family have gathered for a picnic. Vinnie, a sensitive young girl retires to a nearby hilltop to brood on life and the various members of her family. As her memories on the last two days flit through her mind, an impression of each of the adults is gained. Through her reactions, an especially fine portrayal of Vinnie is given the reader.

One unusual quality for the present period of writing to be noted about this book is its extreme brevity. This gives it a starkness that makes very vivid glimpses of emotional disturbances that we are given. This consists of mere lashes into a critical period in the lives of several people. The connotations of these complications give tragic overtones to the novel.

There is almost no action in the book. We gain our knowledge as impressions drift across Vinnie's mind. This gives an atmosphere of stillness that makes the events described seem like successive paintings.

zation for authority to exceed the limitation imposed upon the expenditures of said district for the school year 1936-37 under the provisions of Chapter 355, Statutes of 1933. If this application is granted, it is estimated that the total expenditures of the district for said year will be $24,225.00; and that the total tax rate for said district will be .87 per $100 of assessed valuation. It is further estimated that this tax rate will be 75 cents higher than the corresponding rate for last year.
In explanation of the necessity for this increase in expenditures, the governing board of said district advises:

Legal Notice

The earthquake so damaged the Cypress school plant that an extensive building and restoration program was undertaken. The architects estimated the cost at $82,500. The first bids over-ran the estimated cost, ranging from $87,500 to $99,200 without overhead. The board rejected bids, trimmed the program, and readvertised. The increase in building costs in the meantime makes it necessary for the district to raise an additional $15,000 as its share of the increased cost. Failure on the part of the district to put up this money will result in the stopping of construction and withholding of grant by the government. Two-thirds of the old plant has been razed and new portions cannot be completed without raising $15,000 by district tax. The remainder of the budget is essentially the same as last year.
This application is now under consideration by the State Board of Equalization, and any elector residing in said district who desires to do so is invited to express his views regarding the necessity of the above described expenditures, either by writing to the State Board of Equalization, P. O. Box 1739, Sacramento, or by calling personally at the office of said Board, 129 State Capitol, Sacramento. Those desiring to be heard should write or call promptly, as the matter will be submitted for final consideration not later than July 22, 1936.

Today's Guest Editorial

By DR. GEORGE A. WARMER,
Pastor First Methodist Church

The "Guest Editor" selects his own subject matter and it may or may not agree with the opinions of the publisher. The Register will invite and publish daily "guest editorials" by some prominent, practical Orange county citizen.

THE AMERICAN WAY

Man, according to our Constitution, has certain inalienable rights, among which may be enumerated, those of enjoying life and liberty, acquiring and possessing property, the right of free assembly, and free speech. In addition no citizen or class of citizens, shall be granted privileges or immunities which shall not be granted to all. The Revolutionary war fought to gain these rights. The story of the struggle is a long one. Although much has been gained and written into law "eternal vigilance is still the price of liberty," for there are those who from time to time would encroach upon the rights of the masses.

The common people have always had to contend for their liberty and privileges. In fact each new liberty has been the flame that consumed its prophet. The masses can so easily be imposed upon by the rich and powerful. This condition has prevailed from the times of Amos and Hosea down to the present. It seems that there has always been a tendency by those in power to give to special groups or individuals certain rights or immunities which have been denied to the general public. "Pull" has become group pressure in America. "Influence" is a word which expresses vast possibilities. Those who want something not granted to everyone, depend upon "pull" and "influence" and many times have been able to obtain special privileges and rights which are not granted to the general citizenry.

We are proud of our American institutions and ideals. Sometimes however we allow special privilege and immunity to drag our institutions and ideals in the dust, while the cry of the poor and unfortunate have no hearing ear, have at the throne of God.

We have laws against gambling. Yet gambling is not prohibited. Why is it not stopped? Has the gambler, and those who are interested in the income derived from gambling, sufficient "influence" and "pull" to set aside our law, and gain for themselves special privileges and immunities not granted to the general public? Much has been said about the gambling condition in our beach communities. Although much has been said not too much has been done to prevent it. Why? Is it because of "pull" and "influence"?

Some time ago a group of men were arrested on account of their race track activities. Many charges were filed against them. Thus far one of the defendants has pled guilty on one count and has asked for probation. All the other counts were dismissed. Was he guilty of the other counts? If not, then why was he charged with them? If he was guilty, then why have the other counts been dismissed? And what is to happen to the other defendants? Are they to receive a slap on the wrist and go free with an admonition not to do it again? Is it just to assume that those who are interested in this line of endeavor hate "pull" and "influence" which gives to them the right to do unlawful things?

If the Mexican group on strike could muster such influence as these men charged with gambling have done what would be the result? We are not discussing the merits of this labor dispute. Our hearts are made glad that negotiations are in progress for its amicable settlement. The negotiations should result in collective bargaining on such a fair basis that the labor spirit may never again assume such proportions as it has these last days.

Why not? Both major political parties have plank endorsing this method for the settlement of disputes, while the church, through the Federal Council of churches, as well as many denominational utterances, has advocated it. The history of collective bargaining is the story of the peaceable settlement of industrial conflict.

When "pull" and "influence" become the law of the land democracy is defeated. They are alien to American ideals. Special privileges should be granted to none; equal rights should be guaranteed all. This is the American plan.

NON-POLITICAL ACCOUNTING

John R. McCarl, retiring after 15 years' service as comptroller general of the United States, gives this mighty pertinent observation, to wit: bookkeeping and politics never were meant to mix under the American form of government.

That is to say, Mr. McCarl explains, "that an accounting office absolutely and utterly free of politics is essential" in Washington—for all administrations, as a permanent set-up of our government.

At the same time, the retiring comptroller general urges wholesale reorganization of government to effect a "vast monetary saving," and to assure better administration.

We hope the Byrd Senate committee will turn strong recommendations along the line of these suggestions and that the next Congress will carry them out.

The whole problem of government reorganization has been dodged and by-passed quite enough.

Friendship is a strong and habitual inclination in two persons to promote the good and happiness of each other.

THE PROPOSED ORANGE PICKERS' SCALE

According to reports of the proposed statement of the wage scale for picking oranges, as issued on Friday, the pickers were to be paid 20 cents an hour for 9 hours, or $1.80, and 3 cents for each box of oranges picked, with a minimum of 40 boxes for a day's work. This would mean that a man who picked 40 boxes would get $1.80 for his time and $1.20 for picking, or a total of $3. This would cost the growers 71-2 cents a box. If the same man picked 50 boxes in a day, he would get $1.80 for the time and $1.50 for picking the oranges, or a total of $3.30. He would, thus, pick 25 per cent more boxes of oranges and would only get 10 per cent more for picking 25 per cent more oranges. It is hard to understand how this would be fair treatment to the rapid picker.

It logically follows that a wage scale not based in proportion to what the individual picks, but based on the needs of the worker, discourages skill, speed and effort and it also follows, just as logically as night follows day, that there will be more and more of the slow pickers who are unable to get jobs unless the fast pickers go to where they are paid on a straight price basis and these slow pickers will have to be supported by the government and that this support will have to come from other workers; thus, really reducing the real pay of all other workers.

This is not the philosophy on which America has prospered. It prospered on the belief that a man should be paid exactly in proportion to what he produces; that there should be no discrimination. It is approaching rapidly the theory of Russia—that men should be paid in proportion to their needs and not in proportion to what they produce.

It will lead to more and more confusion, more and more dissatisfaction, higher cost and lower standard of living.

Of course, if this is only a temporary expedient to be applied in the portion of the territory where the crop was light this year on account of the winds last year, it is not such a serious matter but to adopt such a plan permanently is not sound economics or is not justice.

It is hoped that the slow worker is not discriminated against as he will eventually be unable to get a job, and if he does get a job, then the fast worker will be discriminated against if he remains at the work because he has to work for less per unit. It is certainly very illogical and cannot beget peace and justice.

COOPERATIVE SPIRIT

The sole purpose of the forum for Political and Economic Education is to bring about public opinion which will permit the maximum aggregate happiness. Those speakers who are scheduled on the program and occupy business or political positions and courageously discuss important economic problems are certainly performing a service to their fellowman. We certainly cannot have better government than the intelligence of the great mass of voters will permit. There is undoubtedly great need for enlightenment on simple, fundamental, economic problems. A frank exchange of ideas on these subjects between prominent people who hold responsible positions or operate successful businesses in our community certainly brings about a better understanding on these subjects.

The community is especially benefitted by the sincere and honest expression in these forum meetings by such public educators as H. G. Nelson, principal Julia Lathrop Junior High School, and Lynn Crawford, principal of the High School, and Mrs. Golden Weston, director of Public Adult Education. Mrs. Weston will participate next Tuesday night at the Junior College building, on the subject as to whether or not unemployment can be caused by the employer not paying high enough wages. Discussions by people of this character, together with our business and professional men, can only help enlighten us on some of the major problems confronting the average voter, yet so little understood by them.

It seems to The Register that we would all be much better off, if we would more nearly approach the doctrine advocated by Herbert Spencer, which we have so often repeated; namely, "it is for each to utter that which he sincerely believes to be true and add his unit of influence to all other units of influence and let the results work themselves out."

The Forum is for that purpose.

TAXES EXCEED PAYROLLS

The sooner the voters realize that taxes really come out of payrolls, the sooner we will put an end to boondoggling and make the government employees deliver value received.

According to the National Association of Manufacturers, the United States industry pays $1.34 in taxes for each $1 it spends on payrolls. The Association based its figures on a survey of conditions in 694 companies in twenty-five industries.

We do not know whether this survey included the unpaid debts or not. If it does not include the government deficit, the amount would be much greater. A dollar's worth of wealth cannot do two jobs; it cannot go to the tax spender and into payrolls. Two people cannot consume the same bottle of milk. If the tax eaters consume the automobiles and luxuries of life, the workers who are not on the government payrolls will have to do without them.

Day By Day In Washington

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
(Copyright, 1936)

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Father Coughlin's use of the term "liar and betrayer" in referring to President Roosevelt will probably come as somewhat of a shock to most people who are accustomed to speaking, publicly at least, in more restrained words about candidates for political office.

But Father Coughlin was addressing a political convention and was presumably speaking as a citizen in a political contest and not as a member of the clergy. Somehow or other, the word "liar" has become an integral part of political campaigning and may be said to be a permanent part of the political vocabulary of the day. Thus, President Roosevelt, on May 14th, 1935, in a speech to a farmers' convention which gathered on the White House lawn, said:

"As you know, a great many of the high and mighty—with special axes to grind—have been deliberately trying to mislead the people who know nothing of farming by misrepresenting—no—why use a pussyfoot word?—by lying about the kind of farm program which this nation is operating today."

The president was characterizing critics of the A.A.A. program, and the definition of a lie, as given by Webster's dictionary, is as follows:

1. A falsehood uttered or acted for the purpose of deception; an intentional statement of an untruth designed to mislead another. The use of the word 'lie' usually implies moral censure and a charge of intention to affect wrongfully the acts, opinions, or affections of another.

"2. Liar—A person who knowingly utters a falsehood; one who does."

Now, in political debate in the past, President Roosevelt had a precedent for describing those who disagreed with him as lying. It will be recalled that President Theodore Roosevelt created what he called the Ananias club, which is described by F. L. Paxson in his recent history of the United States:

"The political method of President Theodore Roosevelt was swift and effective. Again and again he defended himself by denying the correctness of statements of his associates. His denunciation of Justice Parker in 1904 was a typical instance. E. H. Harriman was later brought within the group, and the cartoonists derived much pleasure from their literary creation, the 'Ananias Club,' into which no man was admitted until the president had openly called him a liar."

Now, Father Coughlin might have used some of the pussyfoot words which are, of course, freely employed in political discussion when opponents are accused of being "inconsistent" or at least of saying "contradictory" things. Thus, Mr. Roosevelt's record of public statements on many questions would appear in some respects to be inconsistent, and when the term is used, the public at least gets the impression that perhaps there is some explanation for the inconsistency and that the man who has made the inconsistent statements at least did not do so with intention to deceive.

The question of how far deception may be excused on the ground of political justification is one that will be answered differently, depending on whether it is asked in political circles, or among the citizens generally. The latter are inclined rather strongly to the idea that there is no different code in private life than in public life, that hypocrisy and misrepresentation and "inconsistency" of speech are as much to be deplored when prompted by desires of political expediency as when made in reckless statement by private persons.

As for Father Coughlin, he might have used a pussyfoot word and received less criticism. Somehow, a member of the cloth speaking out positively in just the same way that the political orators do is somewhat of an unusual spectacle. If some Republican had used the word "lie" in charging the New Deal candidate with inconsistency, probably the incident would have attracted little if any attention. Father Coughlin, by reason of his dual position as clergyman and political orator, will undoubtedly be criticized as having been indiscreet, though his friends will doubtless say that he had as much right to discuss the personality and sincerity of a candidate for high office as any other citizen. The incident is regrettable because it puts the campaign on a personal basis when it really ought to be fought out on issues rather than personalities.

After a storm of controversy aroused by President Taft's dismissal of Dr. Harvey W. At last night's meeting an ordinance was read raising the guarantee fund from $50 to $500. An amendment was made requiring $5000 bond from such a company as protection in the case of damages to any person, and severest of the three restrictions, any company doing work upon the streets must do it block by block, and not enter upon work in a new block until completion of the other.

ROOSEVELT RIDES THE LANDON BANDWAGON

The latest to leap on the Landon bandwagon, strange to say, is Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Atop the wagon, Mr. Landon has consistently shouted—that is, as much as Mr. Landon ever shouts—that we must wage war on the monopolist.

The war cry that surged through him when, as a lad, he was a Bull Moose surges again.

Mr. Roosevelt might have been expected to sound this same cry when he took office in 1933, for the Democratic Wilson sounded it in 1912 as did the Republican T. R.

But Mr. Roosevelt did not say much about monopoly in 1933.

The big word with him then was PLANNING.

He even let the bars down for the monopolists in return for their help in putting over a planning program in the NIRA.

And, strange to say, in his planning program, Mr. Roosevelt took over most of the formulas of the monopolists — production limitation, price fixing and the elimination of competition.

I scanned his acceptance speech eagerly to see how often he would use the word planning.

I was disappointed. Instead he began beating the tom-tom against the monopolists he had traded horses with in 1933, soft-pedaled the whole business of planning, and outdid Landon in his onslaught against monopoly.

They are both on the same bandwagon, as far as speech goes, and the only difference now is between the warm hearted and the icily indifferent. I may use Mr. Roosevelt's phrasing.

Why this shift in Rooseveltian tactics? The answer is simple. The people are sick of planning by politicians. They want a truly free economy divested alike of monopolists and planners. And even the planners know their master's voice.

OUR CHILDREN

BY ANGELO PATRI

THE UNHAPPY READER

"Simon is very backward in reading. Please hear him read every day during vacation so he can at least start where he left off next fall."

Simon's mother read that note with a sinking heart. Every night for the past ten months she had made Simon sit by her and read a lesson from his reader. It had been slow hard work. The pages had been wet many a night as the little boy struggled and bogged down. This had to go on even through the pleasant summer evenings when the other little boys were having a last game of Cops and Robbers before calling it a day. Something must be done.

"Well, Mrs. Cooley, I don't see what we can do about it. He is backward. If he doesn't read every night—suppose you ask Miss Lavinia about it? She knows about these young ones better than I do."

Miss Lavinia listened to the sad story of Simon and his reader. "Tell you what you do. Get a story book, an easy one, not a school reader. A story like Little Black Sambo. Tell Simon you have a grand story for him. Begin reading it to him sometime when he is not anxious to do something else. When you get to an easy part, where there is dialogue or repetition, say, 'Now you read a bit.' Make sure his bit is easy, bright, light reading. Take the book back after he has read his bit, and before he gets to a solid print. Solid print is very discouraging to struggling readers.

Read the story this way to the end. Don't hold him long. Pick the easy places for him before you start the session. A teacher always has to be prepared carefully so as to meet the difficulties before the child meets them. Pick out the spots he is to read, keep the session down to fifteen minutes. Keep his readings down to about two or three minutes each. He will read longer and do more if you DO NOT PRESS HIM.

It is not wise to drill poor readers on words, keep them long periods at reading, unless one knows precisely that this is what the child needs. This is rarely what he needs. The child who has reading power reads by the time he is six years old. By the time he reaches the third grade he has mastered the mechanics of reading and is about ready to read for information and pleasure. If he has not developed this power in spite of much effort and instruction, you can be sure that he has some basic difficulty for which drill is worse than useless.

The slow reading child, one who has no basic defect of visual memory, interpretation and the rest of the reading processes usually benefits by reading little and often, beginning with very easy and interesting material. Even in his case guard against fatigue caused by overwork.

What Other Editors Say

THE ACCEPTANCE ADDRESS

(Reprinted in the Chicago Tribune from the Bucyrus, O. Telegraph-Forum, which is owned by the publisher of The Register.)

Mr. Roosevelt's speech of acceptance at Philadelphia was his masterpiece of misrepresentation. He referred to his three years in office as a period of "rescue." He would have 125,000,000 persons believe that, until he and his brain trust were placed in control, they were a down-trodden people to whom all of the privileges of liberty and life itself had been denied by a small group of modern Simon Legrees. He wants them to believe that through those terrible twelve years of Republican leadership they were like ants dodging around the crushing feet of a "privileged few."

He wants them to forget that it was during that terrible era that swept the land through the Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover administrations that they purchased their automobiles, strengthened their bank accounts and incidentally, their independent social security. He does not want them to remember that those were the years through which they drew their highest salaries and received, in most instances, prompt recognition of their wants from their industrial and commercial employers.

It was during those years that the major portion of today's great highway system was constructed to meet the demand of a happy people whose fattened bank accounts permitted them to enjoy the luxury of travel, but the President would have them believe today that they were dreaming. The President tries now to tell them that they were "underprivileged," cogs of the great machine of that overworked word capitalism.

We need not recall that those happy underprivileged people who were enjoying the prosperity of those twelve awful years were those of the shops, the stores, the offices, and the farms. They were not only the privileged few of the financial east as Mr. Roosevelt would have us believe. One can go now into any mixed crowd here in Bucyrus or in any American city and hear this statement:

"We can't afford to do the thing we used to do," or "We can't afford the trips we used to take." The "used to" means the dreadful years of suffering as Mr. Roosevelt pictures them, under Harding, Coolidge and Hoover.

Further, he said: "In those days (those terrible twelve years) we feared fear. That was why we fought fear. And today, my friends, we have won against the most dangerous of our foes—we have conquered fear." He fails or refuses to recognize that the greatest producer of fear is financial instability, whether it be personal or national. A man who spends more than he earns and makes a big showing while running in debt cannot escape eventual ruin. A government is no different.
